Editing a Newspaper.

EXPERIENCE OF A SUBSTITUTE—REMARKABLE SCENE IN A FRENCH NEWSPAPER OFFICE.

The editor of the Cigare is obliged to leave Paris for four and twenty hours; the sub-editor selects this precise moment for being ill, and M. Aristide Gruan, the Nestor of the staff, is absent canvassing a provincial constituency in his own and the liberal interest. So the editor sees nothing for it but to ask M. Timoleon Tartine, before starting, kindly to discharge his functions for a single day; and M. Tartine, who would have taken the command of the army of the Loire at five minutes' notice, consents with pleasure. However, the editor feels some slight misgivings; not that he mistrusted M. Tartine's head, but he knows his heart—Mr. Tartine is prone to enthusiasm. Wherefore, in getting into the train, the director of the Cigare points out to his chroniquer, who has come to see him off, that after all there will not be much to do, that he has given the main directions for the next number, and that the principal thing will be to watch that nothing creeps into his leaders or the notes likely to hurt the feelings of Gen. de Ladirault, an awkward person to offend by reason of the state of siege. M. Tartine promises. Then the editor conveys a counter-warning against insidious government secretaries who prowl about seeking admission for semi-official paragraphs in influential papers; but at this M. Tartine protests with so much warmth that he would recognize a government secretary even disguised under a bear's skin, and perceive the drift of his prose though it were couched in Sanskrit or Carribee, that the editor feels re-assured. In another minute the train has disappeared, and M. Tartine walks out of the station with a four-and-twenty hours' kingship of the most popular organ in Paris.

Having about sixteen hours to spare before he need commence his duties—for this is evening and the Cigare does not appear till 5 on the morrow—M. Tartine goes and dines, and thence to the play; and, being of communicative mood, he tells what friends he meets that it is he who for the nonce rules the destinies of the Cigare. The result of this is that by midnight the report has been flashed down the whole line of the boulevards and into every newspaper office of the capital that M. Tartine has been intrusted with a post which he will fill, not for a day—for rumor is fond of additions—but for a month, some even say six weeks; and at 11 o'clock the next day, when he comes down to the office, M. Tartine finds a whole throng of affectionate friends, who, knowing his benevolent disposition, shake him by the hand, offer him their assistance, and meanwhile would be much obliged if he would render them some little services which they will explain if he will just give them each five minutes in private. Truth to say M. Tartine has slept soundly as did the great Conde on the eve of Rocroy. Intrepidity is his characteristic. He accepted the functions delegated to him, excepting nothing and fearing nothing; and the levee of suitors takes him a little aback. Nevertheless, he rallies on recognizing in one a popular novelist, in the other a fluent debater, in the third an enterprising money man, and he gallently leads the way into the editor's room, whither the novelist follows him, shutting the door to exclude the other two. He has not much to ask, has the man of fiction; he simply wants the Cigare to announce a novel of his that is coming out. "Oh, certainly, with pleasure," says M. Tartine; "what is the title?" "Oh, there's not much in the tittle!" answers the author, modestly. "It's 'Des Chevaliers du Boudoir;' but the scope of these words often needs to be explained to the public beforehand, so that they may not go away with wrong impressions.—This is a realistic study of life. Perhaps something in this style would do" and he draws a paper from his pocket. "I didn't write the paragraph myself, it was a friend did it. Thank you, I know I may rely upon you; good morning." And he vanishes, leaving M. Tartine to read: "It is with immense satisfaction that we announce a new work from the pen of M. A——, the gifted author of Les Peches Roses, Le Scandale de la Rue X——,' and and other delightful books. Anything more piquant in style, more interesting in plot, or more thoroughly artistic in conception than this new novel into which M. A—— has thrown his minutely realistic powers of description, his ——" "Yes, but stay," cries M. Tartine, "this reads like an advertisement." However, he has no time to move, for the door opens and in rushes the fluent debater, distancing the money man by a head. "My dear M. Tartine, look at this!" he ejaculates, displaying yesterday's Cigare; "here is the parliamentary report, and, to begin with, my speech, as you observe, is most humiliatingly curtailed; but I shouldn't complain if it were not for this passage. See, I have a discussion with a member of the left, a radical, and you give him the best of it, for after his joke at me—a miserly small joke—you add, 'hilarity on all the benches,' just as if I had made no repartee." "But did you make one?" asks M. Tartine. "Why, of course," answers the fluent debater; "at least if I hadn't, you know, it ought to come to the same thing; for if the Cigare, an orderly journal, gives the palm to men of that sort—red republicans, communalists and destroys the society—what are we to expect? I think, perhaps," (here a paper is extracted from the waistcoat), "if you would kindly insert this little note—I didn't write it myself; it was a friend who did it. Thanks. I know I can confide in your courtesy. Good morning." And he, too, disappears, yielding his place to the money man, who enters just as M. Tartine has read this much: "By a printer's error in our yesterday's impression, the brilliant witticism by which M. B——, the eloquent member for ——, utterly pulverized M. C——, the radical deputy who interrupted him, was omitted. M. C—— said—" "Pardon me, my dear M. Tartine," interposes the money man. "I am aware how valuable your time is. I shall not be a minute. Here is the Cigare's money article of yesterday. Do you see these lines? That may prove the death of the Oyster Shell joint stock utilization company, in which the savings of thousands are invested; and I am convinced nothing can be further from your thoughts." "Nothing," assents M. Tartine. "Well, but look," groans the money man. "You say there is a depression on our shares. Only think of the immensity of the undertaking on which we are embarked! Picture to yourself the millions upon millions of oyster-shells that formerly lay about idle, but which now, through our instrumentality, may be the means of pouring gold into the homes of the penurious. Ours is no mere speculation; it is a patriotic enterprise; and surely a paper like the Cigare ought to encourage it. Oh! I know what you were going to reply; but even supposing it to be true that the shares were depressed, will the saying so in your paper tend to make them go up again? Remember it is in the interest of our shareholders—our trusting share-holders—not in my own, that I am urging this, and" (here some fumbling in the pocket,) "I think if you were to intercalate this in your next money article, it would spare you a pang or two of remorse should our company ever unhappily collapse—which, mind, I am certain it never will." "Yes, but—one moment!" ejaculates M. Tartine. "Yes, as many moments as you like," answers the money man, "and if you like I will explain you all the working of our company. I have thoughtfully brought the prospectuses with me. And he sits down.

It takes half an hour by the clock before M. Tartine can dispose of the money man, who has plied figures with an energy of lung which drives his hearer stark desperate. He is compelled to surrender at discretion, and the money man then makes his affable bow, vowing that conversation with M. Tartine is quite a pleasure and profit. He is scarcely gone when the office-boy enters to say there are three more gentlemen waiting to see the editor, and two ladies; and at the same moment comes the printer—a French printer, brisk, discursive, and by alternate fits despondent and over-sanguine—to say that there is no copy in hand, that half the paper ought to be made up by this time, and that everything will to a certainty be late. "But what am I to do?" ejaculated M. Tartine in frenzy; "I can't write for the whole paper." But has monsieur read his letters? inquires the printer. "What letters?" asks M. Tartine, and here his eye lights for the first time on some three scores of unopened envelopes arranged symmetrically before him. "Tell everybody that I am busy!" he roars to the office-boy, "let not a soul come in." "But the gentlemen and the two ladies!" remonstates the boy. "Let them be—! let them come to-morrow when I am not here," yells M. Tartine; and feverishly he breaks open the envelopes in rapid succession:—"To the editor of the Cigare. Sir: One of your contributors asserts that Remus died in the year 753 B. C.; the correct date of that historical event is——" "Sir: I am surprised to see one of your contributors, in alluding to the death of Remus, appears to put faith in the existence of that personage. Surely he must be aware that——" "Sir, that the long exploded fallacy as to the death of Remus should have found place in your columns strikes me as being in every way deplorable." "I wish to heaven," breaks out M. Tartine, "that Remus——what's the matter now?" This to the office boy, who has come back scared, to say that the gentlemen outside refuse to go away, and have sent in their cards. M. Tartine glances at the pasteboards; they are those of officers on the staff, and the words "affaires d'honneur" are penciled in the corner of one of them. Needs must when honor drives, and the gentlemen are introduced. "In these delicate matters it is better to speak plainly and at once," begins the bluffest of the military men in a voice that makes the window panes rattle. "An insult has been offered, and either a full apology or a reparation by arms must be the alternative." "But what insult has been offered!" inquires nonplussed M. Tartine. "Do you call this no insult, sir?" sings out the military man, thrusting a back number of the Cigare under M. Tartine's face and flashing lightning from his eyes; and he reads: "There is no disguising that ever since they have been put into their new jackets with fur around the collars the officers of the staff display an unfortunate likeness to a tropical red-legged and rufly bird, called the Soudon goose." "But I didn't write that," protests M. Tartine. "But you're the editor, Sir, and at a moment when the army has just saved society by stifling lawlessness and plunder, you deserve to be held responsible for all statements calculated to bring the service into ridicule." "Well, then, I am responsible," retorts M. Tartine, exasperated. "Let it be what you please—swords, pistols, or blunderbusses; my friends are Messieurs Plumeau and de Linea, whom you will find in the next room, but for patience sake, let me alone till 5 o'clock." "We are not bent upon a duel," puts in one of the officers—he is louder of speech than the other; "an apology will serve us." "No," shouts M. Tartine, impatient more at the tone of his interlocution than at the demand. "I will retract nothing; I endorse to the full all my friend's sentiments about the Soudon goose. It was well said, gentlemen, and I make a personal matter of it. I wish you good morning." After this there remains nothing but to make freezing bows all round, which is done and M. Tartine is left once more alone. But not for long. Once again the printer appears: "It is one o'clock, sir, and we really must have some copy." M. Tartine with glaring eyes, makes a dart at a blue envelope. "This is from Jules Sifflot; I know his hand, and its his turn to write the chronique to-day." He breaks the seal and reads: "My dear Tartine—I am extremely sorry, but the sudden illness of an aunt (I am her heir, which makes it important) calls me from town a day or two. Try and do without me to-day if you possibly can. Emotion prevents me from writing a single line other than these few to acquaint you with my misfortune. Yours," &c. "This is pretty business," moans M. Tartine, and wildly he snatches up one after the other all the envelopes that are of bulky aspect. In quick succession the parcels of copy in them litter the floor; until at last M. Tartine, whose blood is at 212 deg. Fahrenheit, lights upon the article of a gentleman who evidently wrote his effusion in a vein of coolness nearly similar. "Prætorianism" is the title, and it begins: "Is it conceivable that we should have waded through half a dozen revolutions to find ourselves now more than ever under the spurs of an arrogant soldiery, who—" "Yes, that's it—arrogant soldiery!" exclaims M. Tartine, delighted; "that the very term. This man's article goes in where Sifflot's chronique should have stood. "Here, off with it to the press." And he hands it fluttering to the printer. That functionary examines the last page. "No signature, sir, and I don't know the writing." "Neither do I," says M. Tartine, burrowing among the papers on the floor; "there was a letter with it which I can't find. But what matters? I'll sign it myself; I honor the man who penned it." And he does sign. The printer shrugging his shoulders, departs and makes room once again for the office-boy. "If you please, sir," snivels the youth, keeping half his body behind the door, for the editor pro tem is really looking ferocious— "if you please, the ladies outside say they won't go, and both of them are coming in!" M. Tartine starts up with an expletive which there is no necessity to recall; but at the same instant he stands silent and admiring, for the foremost of the two ladies has thrown up her veil, and he has recognized one of the fairest actresses in Paris. That lady, however, seems by no means so with him as he with her. "M. Tartine," she gasps, "you have a dramatic critic who is not worth the rope it would cost to hang him. Did one ever see such a passage as this, printed yesterday—yesterday, I say! Do you hear me?" and tearing the paper in her eagerness to unfold it with her tightly-gloved little hand, she screams: "He accused me of having false hair, and further on he suspects my teeth are sham. False hair and teeth! Nothing less. Ah, now just you look!" and before the dumb stricken M. Tartine can divine her intention, off goes her bonnet and down streams her hair in brilliant cascades over her shoulders. "Is it false?" she cries in triumph, catching hold of the journalist's hand and thrusting it into the silky masses. "And these—are they false?" pressing his fingers to her teeth. "Will you answer, sir, are they false? "No," cries M. Tartine, "I would swear it before all the world." "Well, then, sit down there and write a handsome apology, to be printed this very day," says the actress, as she begins to do up her hair, half laughing, half angry; and seeing M. Tartine sit down, she adds with coaxing peremptoriness: "And look here; you can point out what a curmudgeon my manager is in giving me such a small salary, and warn him that the Russians will be bidding for me or the English, and winning me, too, if he is not more liberal."

The next day the editor returns, and on going down to the office M. Tartine finds him pale, but evidently resigned. A writ has just been brought in from the Governor of Paris, interdicting the sale of the Cigare in the public streets in consequence of the article headed "Prætorianism." Notice of an action for libel has just been sent in from the manager of a theatre; and the Cigare has been accused of venality by three morning papers because of a paragraph on the "Oystershell joint-stock company." "And that is not all," remarks M. Tartine, grimly, when this chapter of woes is unfolded to him. "To-morrow I fight Capt. Spadasse, of the staff, with swords. When next you go out of town pray don't ask me to edit the Cigare. Once in a way's enough." "I think so, too," answers the editor.—[Pall Mall Gazette.

THE DAILY FREEMAN.

CITY OF KINGSTON, (RONDOUT.)

WEDNESDAY MORNING, MAY 29, 1872.

The School Question.

As our correspondents on the School Question have had the use of the Free Parliament for some weeks, and the discussion begins to grow stale because of its length, we ask them to defer it for a time, at least until prior to the annual school elections. Then it will be fresh—a point not to be over-looked when a reform is demanded.

There are some points, however, which we can not pass over without an observation. As the rules of the Board of Education now read, a scholar is expelled whenever he or she has a certain number of marks for absence. This is arbitrary and impracticable. The American parent can't be forced, but can be coaxed.—If the teachers would only go to them and point out the necessity for a regular attendance, fathers and mothers would try to see that their little ones went to school. In spite of all that may be said, parents love their progeny, and are willing to deny themselves almost every luxury for their good. Teachers can work on this cord of affection and accomplish wonders. But if they should do so, how much more is it the true task of a Superintendent to know all the complaints of the employers, and to consult with them in a broad spirit of charity. He should be a mediator, not a dictator. The last he cannot be for any length of time.

Then again, there are children who are kept out of school a portion of the time by indigent mothers. They want them to be the first men and women of the land, but whatever their mental yearnings may be, they must live on bread and meat. The children help earn it. Now is it not better for them and society to go to school whenever they can, than to stay at home all the time? We know it is urged that this retards those who do go regularly. This is admitted, but we as readily assert the first great duty of life is to protect the weak.—It is better for poor children to attend school one day in a week, than not at all; and then, the necessities of a family must lie hidden in the parents' breasts. It is a delicate point for a teacher or superintendent to handle.

Mr. Wickle points out many abuses which, if true, ought to be cast out of the school management; but his suggestions would have come with better grace when he was superintendent than they do now. It is more honorable to practice reform when in office, than cant about it when there is no opportunity to hold a position.

The FREEMAN honors the parties engaged in discussing the status of our schools. They show by their walk and conversation they are in earnest. But we would like to know how often they visit their children and teachers in the school-room. That would test the practicability of their zeal. Neither can be too closely watched, nor can the parents be too circumspect with themselves. It will demoralize any school to have its teachers and trustees denounced as rogues in the presence of the pupils. This is a hit at the great source of school troubles.

The Railroad.

The Litchfields continue to settle the accounts of the late R. & O. R. R., with certificates payable one quarter in cash, and the same fraction in three, six and nine months. We suppose this "long time" is the result of the bad management of those who lately attempted to run the road without brains or money. Had the great party had possession much longer, it would have been a bankrupt institution. Indeed it remains to be seen how Litchfield is going to rescue the road and bring it on a sound financial basis. Young men, though, accomplish by pluck, what old heads fear to take hold of. We hope for success for this one, for he has talent and perseverance.

Justice in Ulster.

The time was when Ulster County stood ahead, in the estimation of the world, for its devotion to virtue and the administration of justice. In the days when the Dewitts, Tappens and Clintons lived within her borders and conducted public affairs, the criminal was caught and punished. They are dead and the scale of justice has fallen into other and worse hands. Murderers escape justice or are nominally punished; thieves steal and if caught only leave us for a few months to return to plunder our cities. The name of Ulster has become a reproach in criminal annals.

Thoughtful men feel the justice of this accusation and cry aloud for a redemption. Go where you will through the country towns, men are constantly regretting this state of affairs; yet we seem as far from a correct enforcement of the law as ever. Cliques of men have the power to control courts as well as caucuses. But lately a grand jury, supposed to be "good men and true", refused to indict John C. Brodhead, late county Treasurer, although it was clearly proven he converted the public money to his own use, and stood then, as he does now, a defaulter for about $100,000. A proper regard for our children should have moved that jury to make an example of this plunderer for their good. His coadjutors are too powerful for the laws of justice. How long is this to continue? Certainly for all time if good men do not raise their forces against it and band together for the protection of morals. The time has come to do this; why put it off? Servility to rogues will not rectify evil.

Associated Press Dispatches.

BY TELEGRAPH TO DAILY FREEMAN.

GREAT BRITAIN.

LONDON, May 28.

In the House of Commons this evening, Gladstone replied to the questions put last night by Disreali, and Horseman concerning the supplemental article. He made no statement of importance, and added nothing to information already possessed by the public, on the subject.

A lively sensation was created in the House this evening by a bold protest from Tom Hughes against horse racing, and the usual adjournment of Parliament for the Derby, which occurs to-morrow.

Gladstone moved that the House adjourn until Thursday. Hughes rising to oppose the motion, was received with ironical cheers and laughter. He pointed to the fact that the House adjourned only two hours on ascension day, for divine worship, and now proposed to adjourn twenty-four hours for the Derby. It was incompatible with the dignity of the Commons to recognize horse racing. The English race course had introduced the most corrupt and insidious system of gambling which had ever disgraced any country. While he was opposed to this species of amusement, he believed in manly sports, like international boat races, cricket, and other salutary competitions of human strength and pluck, and thought they should be encouraged.

The motion for adjournment was carried, 212 to 58.

CUBA.

HAVANA, May 28.

The Insurgents have again made their appearance in the eastern department.

While the gun boat Canto was entering the Bay of Baves, she was fired upon by a band of rebels who had taken up their position on the cliffs which overhang the channel. The channel is narrow and crooked, and the rebels had every chance to pour upon the gun boat a deadly fire, but owing to the presence of mind of her commander and the men at the wheel, the boat was kept on its course until an opportunity was afforded her to use her guns, when she opened fire with her heavy guns on the rebels, and the cliff was soon evacuated. The commander, pilot and two of the sailors of the Canto were wounded.—This is the first time the rebels have attacked a gunboat.

A company under command of ex Insurgent Urquizas, captured and executed Insurgent Colonel Jaimemorns, his two sons and four others, and killed ten of the rebels under Vicnent Garcia during the different engagements Spanish Captain Lazaro was killed.

Colonel Gonzales Baet lately discovered a conspiracy against the Spaniards among the prisoners confined at Cascoro and Guaimaro. It is reported that this conspiracy had extended to Sebanica, Las Tunas, Manzanillo and other places.

A report is current at Puerto Principe that Spanish troops during an engagement with Agramonte's band, killed 22 men and captured 2 officers. The same Spanish force also defeated a body of Insurgents who were on their way to join the Insurgent President, by way of the southern coast.

THE TUG BOAT EXPLOSION.

NEW YORK, May 28.

As near as can be ascertained some thirty persons were more or less injured by the explosion of the steam tug Epsilon yesterday.—Of these, six are so severely injured as to render their recovery doubtful. The surgeons say that Engineer Curry can live but a few hours, and the systems of many are so badly shattered that they would not recover with even less severe body wounds. Captain Hallenbeck and Fireman McCormack are the only men of the Epsilon who have not been found. It is is rumored that the tug Devoe picked up Captain Hallenbeck, but the report was not confirmed.

Low water in the boiler is said to be the cause of the explosion. Just previous to the explosion Capt. Hollenback remarked that he had the best boat in the harbor, that she would carry one hundred pounds of steam without starting a bolt or opening a valve, and that he could not get steam enough in the boiler to burst it. Men are engaged in grappling for bodies. The wreck will be raised in a few days.

THE PRESIDENT'S INTERVIEW WITH RED CLOUD.

WASHINGTON, May 28.

The President to-day gave an audience to Red Cloud and his delegation of Indians. The President through an interpreter spoke as follows:

"Tell them I am glad to see them here, and to know that they have tried hard to carry out the promises heretofore made to keep peace with the white people. Red Cloud could not prevent the murder which recently took place in their country, but would have done so if he could. These murderers are outlaws with him as well as with us. We want to do all we can to advance and help Red Cloud and his people, that they may become self supporting. The time will come when the game will give out, when they must resort to other means of subsistance. We want to place them on lands where they can have permanent homes, and to make the location agreeable to them. They must talk further on this subject to the Secretary of the Interior, who acts for me.

I do not want them to remove beyond the present territory which they now occupy, except with their own consent. I desire them to reflect on this subject, as the advantages are not for a day or a year, but for ever. If they consent to this I will tell them all we will do. If they will go to the Cherokee country, we will set apart lands for themselves and their children.—It is a large country where they will never suffer from cold. We will build houses for their chiefs and give them all shelter, and supply them with produce and cattle, and encourage them in farming, and assist them in raising stock, and appoint for this purpose either Indians or white men, as they shall prefer. We will also instruct them how to read and speak English, and otherwise contribute to their comfort, so that when the game is all gone they may live securely and comfortably. All the treaty obligations we have entered into with them, will be kept by us so long as they respect them.

Any reply Red Cloud and Red Dog have to make must be made to the Secretary of the Interior, after they have talked over among themselves what I have suggested.

Red Cloud replied: He had very few words to say, and then spoke about the agency in his country. The President reminded them that that was a subject of talk with the Secretary of the Interior, and the Commissioners of Indian affairs. He was glad that Red Cloud and his braves had passed through our country. The number of our people though very large, was increasing every day, and more persons come from foreign countries to this in a year, than the whole number of Indians in America.

The Secretary of the Interior said to the Indians that he had the Presidents views on the subject, and would consult them on the location of the agency before they left the city, and now proposed to retire, as the Presidents public business afforded him no further time for talk.

The Indians then filed before the President, each shaking him by the hand as they retired from the room.

The Greatest Excitement SINCE THE FLOOD!

A. M. Low's

PROCLAMATION FOR 1872, READ IT!

A. M. LOW, the popular Boot and Shoe Dealer of No. 19 Wall street, City of Kingston, desires the people to know that he has stocked his store for the Spring and Summer of 1872 with all the very latest styles of Boots and Shoes, which he is now offering at a figure that is an inducement for all in want of foot gear to extend to him their patronage. In the line of Men's Wear he introduces for the season a superior article of hand-made shoes, manufactured by Messrs. HANAN & REDDISH, of New York City. They are decidedly the "nobbiest" style ever placed in the market, made from the very best material and of the very best finish, and for which he is the sole agent in the City of Kingston. Besides these he has all other kinds in market of all the various shapes, styles, quality and prices.

Low has also the exclusive sale in this city of Women's and Misses' Shoes manufactured by Reynolds Brothers of Utica, and Munsen & Co. of Albany, articles celebrated for their beauty, finish, durability and peculiarity of preserving their shape. He is selling heaps of them daily, which is the best advertisement they can have, for everybody who buys them recommends them to their neighbors. As usual his stock is full in all the other grades of this line and will be kept so during the season.

Boys, Youths, Misses, Children, and Infants all go to Low's to get their feet clothed, for there they can find a stock to select from that beats anything outside of New York City. Had he space he would like to enumerate further—but it would fill this paper, and therefore he is obliged to stop with the simple announcement that he has the LARGEST STORE AND STOCK IN THE CITY—that he purchases at Wholesale and sells at retail, and that he is determined to keep the lead in his line of business, and not seeking a monopoly, invites competition from all sources, confident that he shall at least make his store worthy of patronage and one of the leading features of the new City of Kingston.

Respectfully, A. M. LOW,
42m8 No. 19 Wall Street, Kingston.

THE DAILY FREEMAN.

CITY OF KINGSTON, (RONDOUT.)

WEDNESDAY MORNING, MAY 29, 1872.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Coal.

D. C. Overbaugh receives 100 tons of coal daily at his yard on Union Avenue.

Personal.

The Hudson Register of Monday gives Geo. Von Beck a very flattering notice. We would advise that youth to "stay away from thar."

His Honor.

His Honor Mayor Lindsley left on Tuesday evening for a visit to Louisville, Kentucky, where he will remain for ten days or two weeks.

New Appointment.

Horace P. Breed, formerly of St. Paul, Minn., has been appointed Superintendent of the New York, Kingston and Syracuse Railroad, vice R. B. Emerson.

The Currant Worm.

The currant worm, that pest of fruit raisers, has made its appearance, and unless its ravages are checked, threatens devastation to the currant and goosberry bushes.

The Will of Senator Hardenberg.

Citations for proof of the will of Jacob Hardenbergh have been issued, returnable June 10th, 1872. The value of his estate is not known, but supposed to be about $50,000.

Congregational Meeting.

At the Presbyterian congregational meeting on Tuesday evening, the trustees were authorized to sell the present church site, and the meeting adjourned to Tuesday evening, June 11th.

Licenses.

All persons who have paid their license money to the Board of Excise can obtain their certificates by calling at the office of the city clerk in Fireman's Hall, Fair street, from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M.

Gone Up.

Thomas Geary, who was arrested one day last week for brutally beating his wife, living at Kington Point, was taken by officer Tammany to the penitentiary at Albany on Friday, where he is to serve out a sentence of three months at hard labor.

Wife Deserter.

John Nugent, who lived at Ponckhockie and who deserted his wife and family on Christmas day, returned to this city not long since, was arrested by officer Tammany and committed to jail by the Recorder until he can furnish bail in the sum of $500, for the support of his wife and family.

Bad Practice.

A correspondent writes very earnestly, but too lengthily, urging the enforcement of the ordinance leaving horses and wagons on the cross-walks. The practice is certainly a bad one, as it makes it necessary often that pedestrians go into the mud. Let this law be enforced by all means.

Real Estate Changes.

Hon. Thomas Cornell has purchased the interest of the Maurice Von Beck heirs in the Masonic Hall, and now owns the whole of that property.

The Goldberg building on Division street has been sold to John O'Connor. The sale was effected through Stow & Benson's real estate agency.

Arrests.

Egbert Reed was arrested on Monday by officer Tammany on complaint of Elias Devens, a captain of a canal-boat, and taken before the Recorder for stealing rope from the boat. The evidence not being sufficient to convict Reed the complaint was withdrawn by Devens. The same officer also arrested Robert Long, Diven Fields and John Murphy for being drunk and disorderly in the lower portion of the city. They were committed to jail by the Recorder until they become sufficiently sober to stand an examination and show cause why the outraged majesty of the law should not be punished.

Lost in the Quarries.

Four young gentlemen of this city, on pleasure intent, hired a fine "rig" on Sunday, and started for the "rural districts." After a day spent in such enjoyment as the place and occasion furnished, as the shadows began to fall they started homeward. But on their way they bethought them of making a tour of investigation in the classic region of Hallihan's Mountain. They investigated not wisely but too much; for they lost their way in the labrynthine woods and hollows, and darkness coming on apace, their plight was sad indeed. In dire distress they wandered around, till at last a kind fortune threw them in the way of a native, who, for a certain pecuniary consideration, consented to lead them to a section with which they were better acquainted, and late at night the youths reached home, "mighty glad to get out of the wilderness."

Rev. E. W. Bliss.

The Pittston (Luzerne County, Pa.,) Comet, of the 18th instant, has an account of the services at the installation of Rev. E. W. Bliss, formerly of this city, as pastor of the First Baptist Church of Pittston. The sermon was delivered by Rev. B. D. Thomas, of Philadelphia, the hand of fellowship was offered by Mr. W. P. Hellings, and the charges respectively to the minister and congregation were delivered by Rev. I. Bevan and Rev. D. D. Gray. The Comet says that "Mr. Bliss commenced his pastorate under favorable circumstances, is growing in favor with his people, and is attracting not a little attention from the 'world's people' who have chanced to hear him. He is a scholarly man, uses fine language and preaches God's holy word with the power of conviction."

Trotting.

There was a pleasant little trot on the Rhinebeck trotting course last Saturday, between Wiltwyck, of Kingston, and Lydia, owned in Staatsburgh. There had been made up a purse of $75, to be contested for by four horses. Two of the horses failed to put in an appearance, so it was proposed that Wiltwyck and Lydia trot for the purse. Lydia demanded odds, so Wiltwyck drew a wagon, while Lydia went to harness. The track was heavy. Lydia won in three straight heats. Time 2:53¼, 2:54, 2:51¾. A large number of people were present to witness the sport.

Board of Health.

At a meeting of the Board of Health held at Fireman's Hall, Fair Street, May 24th, there were present, His Honor, the Mayor, Alderman Canfield, Fredenbergh and City Clerk Hasbrouck.

Alderman Canfield reported a case of small-pox in the house of Mr. Atkins on Garden street, and on consultation with the Mayor, the case was ordered removed to the small-pox hospital by the Health Superintendent.

The Mayor reported that A. Rice, on Division street, was not quarantined according to orders, and that the family of said Rice were visiting the store continually, and that the Health Officer had ordered the store closed and the whole family removed to the small-pox hospital.

Ike Signor, the popular Rosendale landlord, will give a grand ball at his house in Rosendale, Friday night. It is given as a sort of cap-sheaf to the races of the Plains that close on that day; and no doubt there will be a full house and a merry crowd.

A Terrible Disaster.

News of a terrible disaster to the Newfoundland fishing fleet is brought to New York by Captain Allston, one of the survivors of the catastrophe. A terrible hurricane has swept over that region, and so far as known over forty vessels have been destroyed. Many were literally ground to pieces among the icebergs and floating ice-fields. Among the vessels heard of being destroyed, were four steamships, the rest being sail vessels. The ships carried on an average, crews of one hundred men each, and many entire crews perished.—Of above four thousand men only about one hundred and seventy-five have been heard from.

Capt. Allston brings a confirmatory account of the wreck of the Huntsman off the coast of Labrador; but information has been published concerning that disaster. He believes that the consequence of this wholesale ruin to the seal-hunting fleet of Newfoundland, will steep that country again in the poverty and misery from which it has but recently arisen. The dreary news of so many wrecks, and the long catalogue of the dead, spreads desolation over the island, and has visited many a home with bitter grief and despair. But, says Capt. Allston, the whole has not yet been told.—Hundreds of the fleet are still to be heard from, and their fate may be even as gloomy as that of the forty-one vessels of which this account is presented to the readers of the Freeman.

Orders and Regulations of the Board of Health of the City of Kingston.

Pursuant to the charter of the City of Kingston and to an act of the legislature of the State of New York, entitled "An act for the preservation of the public health," passed April 10, 1850, and the acts amending the same, the Board of Health of the City of Kingston hereby make the following orders and regulations to be of general obligation within the limits of said city:

SECTION 1. It shall be unlawful for any conductor on any railroad, or any other stage driver or other person or persons who may transport passengers, or for any captain, commander, master or conductor of any steamboat or of any other water craft, to bring within the limits of the City of Kingston, or to land or permit to be landed within said limits, any person or persons afflicted with the cholera, varioloid, smallpox, typhus, ship or yellow fever or any contagious, malignant or infectious disease, or who has or have been recently and dangerously exposed thereto, or to bring, land or permit to be landed within said limits, any clothes, goods or articles likely to communicate any such disease, without having first obtained the written permission of the health officer so to do; and each and every act or thing herein declared to be unlawful, is hereby prohibited.

§ 2. Every such conductor, stage driver or other person, and every such captain, commander, master or conductor, on arriving at or near the limits of said city, with the train, car, stage coach or other vehicle, or with the steamboat or other water craft, in his charge or under his command, and every corporation or person or persons owning, hiring or chartering the same for the time then being, shall immediately give notice to the health officer, of each and every case of such disease or of recent and dangerous exposure thereto, which may then be, or may then have recently been, in or upon such train, car, stage coach or other vehicle, or in or upon such steamboat or other water craft, and of the fact of there then being or having recently been in or upon the same any clothes, goods or articles likely to communicate any such disease, and, in case of any vessel, of the fact of its having in any manner been so exposed as to be liable to convey or communicate the contagion or infection of any such disease.

§ 3. On receiving such notice or any knowledge or information of any case contemplated by either of the preceding sections, it shall be the duty of the health officer with the utmost practicable dispatch to satisfy himself of the facts, give the appropriate orders or directions and take and enforce the appropriate action contemplated by this section.

Every such conductor, stage driver or other person, and every such captain, commander, master or conductor, and every such corporation, person or persons owning, hiring or chartering any train, car, stage coach or other vehicle or any steamboat or other water craft in or upon which there shall be or shall recently have been any case of any such disease or exposure thereto or any such clothes, goods or articles, which has been so exposed as aforesaid, shall immediately on being required by the health officer so to do, or at the time designated by him for that purpose, thoroughly cleanse, purify and disinfect the said train, car, stage coach or other vehicle or steamboat or other water craft, as the case may be, under and pursuant to the directions of the health officer, or of the officer or person deputed by him to superintend the process of disinfection.

On the like order of the health officer, such clothes, goods or articles shall by the owner or person having charge thereof, be in like manner cleansed, purified and disinfected—or shall be destroyed if in the judgment of the health officer they cannot be so disinfected as to be afterwards used without danger of infection or contagion.

Such steamboat, vessel or other water craft shall be anchored and kept at anchor for such time as the health officer shall deem necessary for the public safety in such place in the waters within the city limits as he shall direct, and there will be no going to or from the same, except by the person or persons and at the times and in the manner permitted by the health officer. The process of cleansing, purification and disinfection shall be repeated at the times and in the manner required by the health officer.

In all cases where the circumstances require it, the patient afflicted with such disease or person who has been dangerously exposed thereto, shall be removed to the hospital provided or to be provided by the board of health or common council, and shall not depart therefrom until discharged by the health officer.

§ 4. Every physician practicing in said city [in addition to the report in writing to the clerk of the board of health required by section fifty-seven of the city charter] shall report in writing to the health officer, any and every case of cholera, varioloid, smallpox, typhus, ship or yellow fever, or of any contagious, malignant or infectious disease, or of recent and dangerous exposure thereto, which shall come under his treatment or observation in said city, immediately after the same shall have become known to him.

§ 5. On receiving such report or any knowledge or information of any case contemplated by the last preceding section, it shall be the duty of the health officer with the utmost practicable dispatch, to satisfy himself of the facts and give the appropriate orders or directions, and take and enforce the appropriate action contemplated by this section.

Every owner, lessee or occupant of any room or rooms, apartment or apartments, house, tenement or other building, in which there shall be or shall recently have been any case of any disease named or mentioned in said fourth section, or of recent and dangerous exposure thereto, shall immediately on being required by the health officer so to do, or at the time designated by him for that purpose, thoroughly cleanse, purify and disinfect the same under and pursuant to the directions of the health officer, or of the officer or person deputed by him to superintend the process of disinfection.

In every such case, if the patient be not removed to the hospital, suitable warning of the disease and its locality shall be given by an appropriate sign or otherwise, and, unless by permission of the health officer, there shall be no communication with the patient except by his or her physician, nurse and immediate attendant or attendants, and there shall be no going to or from the room or house in which the patient may be, except at the times and in the manner and by the persons directed or permitted by the health officer, and, in cases where he shall deem it requisite, the health officer shall station such officers, watchmen or persons as may be necessary, to enforce this provision. The health officer shall personally or by an assistant or assistants, furnish medicines and treat the disease, if the patient in any house or vessel, has no physician.

All such rooms or houses shall be properly ventilated according to the directions of the health officer, and the process of cleansing, purification and disinfection shall be reported at the times and in the manner required by him.

The patient, on consenting thereto, may be removed to the hospital, whenever the health officer deems it advisable; and, in those cases so situated that the health officer deems the means aforesaid insufficient to prevent the disease from spreading, and the public safety requires and the condition of the patient will permit his or her removal to the hospital, the patient, whether consenting or not, shall be removed to the hospital and shall not depart therefrom until discharged by the health officer.

Any person removed to the hospital, may, subject to the regulations which may be made for the government and management thereof, employ and provide his or her own physician and nurse or attendants, and his or her own medicines and sustenance, or his or her relatives or friends may do so; but in the event of any failure by him, her or them to do so, the patient shall be provided with all necessary medical attendance, nursing, medicines and sustenance.

All infected bedding and clothing, whether in any house, vessel, or in the hospital, or in any other place in said city, shall be destroyed before any patient is discharged or case released from quarantine.

§ 6. At such times as the board of health or the health officer may direct, the health superintendent shall make tours of inspection and shall report to the clerk of said board and to the health officer, all cases of nuisances, and all violations of these orders and regulations and of any or either of them.

§ 7. Any corporation, person or persons, causing or maintaining any nuisance, shall suppress, remove or abate the same, immediately on being required by the health officer so to do, or within the time allowed by him for that purpose, and in the manner directed by him.

§ 8. Every owner or occupant of premises shall remove or cause to be removed therefrom, any and all nuisances, within the time and in the manner directed by the health officer; and shall in said time and manner, cleanse and purify with disinfectants approved by him all slaughter houses, hog pens, stables, hen houses or barn yards and all sewers, drains, culverts, sinks and canals or other channels for drainage of said premises.

§ 9. No person or persons shall be allowed to retain on his, her or their premises any goods or articles infected with any malignant, contagious or infectious disease, but the same shall be removed and disinfected or destroyed as the health officer shall direct.

§ 10. Any green hides, bones, putrifying animal matter and any noxious or poisonous animal or vegetable matter, upon any premises, shall be removed therefrom by the owner or occupant, immediately on the order of the health officer, or within the time allowed by him for that purpose, and in the manner he may direct.

§ 11. Every owner or occupant of any house, tenement or other building, shall disinfect the vault of the privy belonging to the same, at least once in each week, and as often in addition and in such manner as may be required by the health officer, and shall cover with clean earth or shall remove the contents of said vault at the time and in the manner directed by him. Such removal shall only be made in the night time.

§ 12. No person or persons shall throw any garbage, animal or vegetable matter or filth of any kind on any street of said city, or into any stream of water or pond therein.

§ 13. The owner or owners, occupant or occupants respectively of every lot, tenement or building in said city shall clean the streets in front of his, her or their lot, tenement or building, at least once a week before nine o'clock in the morning, on the day designated for each street respectively by the health officer, health superintendent or superintendent of streets, sewers and city property.

§ 14. No person or persons shall kill, butcher or slaughter any cattle, sheep, swine or calves, or keep or maintain a slaughter house or any place within the bounds of the city, unless by and with the written consent of the board of health, and subject to such regulations and restrictions as the said board may prescribe.

§ 15. Any and every person keeping a fish or meat market in said city shall thoroughly cleanse the same at least once in every twenty-four hours; and shall freely use such disinfectants, in such manner and as often as the health officer shall direct.

§ 16. No person shall sell or expose for sale within said city the flesh of any calf butchered when under three weeks old, or any other unwholesome meat; or sell or expose for sale or bring within said city any calf less than three weeks old, for the purpose of butchering, or bring the flesh of any such calf within the city.

§ 17. No swine shall be kept within the city, either within any enclosure or running at large, except by special permit from the board of health.

§ 18. All persons occupying any premises are required to give admittance to the board of health or any member or members thereof, the health officer, the health superintendent, or any person employed by said board or health officer, when seeking to inspect or enter the same for the purpose of carrying any of these orders and regulations into effect.

§ 19. No owner, lessee or occupant of any lot, building, tenement house or part thereof, in said city, shall allow the contents of any privy, cess-pool or sink to run off into any yard, street or place in said city.

§ 20. Every owner, lessee or occupant of any vacant lot or other premises in said city, which from lack of drainage, or from imperfect drains, pipes, sewers, vaults or cellars, shall be deemed a nuisance, prejudicial to the public health of said city, by the board of health or the health officer, shall fill in the same or shall construct, repair, or otherwise alter such drains, sewers, pipes, vaults or cellars thereon, as the said board may direct and at such time and in such manner and of such size and material as the board may direct and specify.

§ 21. The keeper or keepers of every hotel, boarding house or lodging house, shall within six hours after the fact shall come to his, her or their knowledge notify the health officer and the clerk of the board of health, in writing, of the fact of any sea-faring man, or person lately from any vessel, being taken sick at such hotel or house, and shall in such notice state where such person may be found, and from what vessel and when he came, to the best of the knowledge of the person giving such notice.

§ 22. No meat, fish, birds, fowl or vegetables, nor any milk, not being healthy, fresh, sound, wholesome and safe for human food, shall be brought into said city, or offered or held for sale in any public or private market, as such food, anywhere in said city.

§ 23. The remains of no person interred in any cemetery or burying ground in said city shall be uncovered or removed therefrom, unless by the special permission of said board of health, expressed in a resolution regulating the time, manner and circumstances of such removal.

§ 24. It shall be the duty of the health superintendent to observe the directions of the board of health and of the health officer. The action of the health officer shall be subject to direction and revision by the board of health; but in all cases under these orders and regulations not requiring consultation with the board of health and in which said board does not require such consultation the health officer as its chief executive officer shall without any unnecessary delay give all such orders and directions and take and enforce such action as these orders and regulations contemplate and as the circumstances may require.

All persons are forbidden to disobey the lawful orders of the health officer, and in case of any disobedience thereof or want of prompt compliance therewith, he may execute the same by the aid or instrumentality of any officers or persons appointed or employed by the board of health, or, in case of emergency, of any person or persons whom he may employ.

These orders and regulations are hereby ordered to be published once in each week for two weeks in THE KINGSTON JOURNAL, and twice in each week for two weeks in THE DAILY FREEMAN, and to be posted in at least twenty-five public places in said city, which is deemed such manner of publication as to secure early and full publicity thereto, and shall take effect forty-eight hours after such posting and their first insertion in said newspapers.

Any person willfully violating or refusing to obey any of the above orders or regulations, will incur the penalty prescribed by the statute in such case made and provided, which reads as follows: "Every person who shall willfully violate or refuse to obey any order or regulation so made and published as aforesaid, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be subject to fine or imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the court, such fine not to exceed one thousand dollars, nor such imprisonment two years."

PHOTOGRAPHIC CARD.

As making pictures of young children has become a very important branch of the business, a few hints on the subject will not be amiss as a guide to those interested.

Mothers who wish to have babies appear in white should dress them in light blue, pink or Solferino; nicely trimmed or embroidered. All blue, or colors mixed with blue, are photographically speaking white, accordingly as the blue more or less predominates.

As children are often troublesome and restless and hard to get a picture of, and as I do not wish to let poor work leave my Gallery, or be bothered with impossibilities over which I have no control, I kindly request mothers to bear in mind that babies should be brought to the Gallery between ten and two o'clock, the nearer ten the better. The reasons for this are obvious, to wit:

FIRST:—THE CHILD IS NOT SO RESTLESS, THE MOTHER IS IN BETTER HUMOR IN THE FORENOON, THE ARTIST IS PRETTY LIKELY TO HAVE HAD HIS BREAKFAST, (WE SELDOM EVER GET DINNER) AND IS NOT SO IMPATIENT, HENCE BABY IS MORE LIKELY TO GET A GOOD PICTURE.

SECOND:—A PHOTOGRAPHER WISHES TO MAKE MONEY, OR AT LEAST A LIVING, AS WELL AS OTHER PEOPLE, AND DON'T LIKE TO BOTHER WITH BABIES IF THE GALLERY IS FULL OF LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, WHO ARE WAITING FOR SITTINGS, AND SEE NO END TO THE BABY-RATTLE AND CRY.

THIRD:—THE LIGHT IS NOT SO POWERFUL IN THE AFTERNOON AS IN THE MORNING.—THE ACTINIC POWER OF THE SUN'S RAYS ARE STRONGER AND MORE ACTIVE FROM SUNRISE TO NOON, THAN FROM NOON TO SUNDOWN. IT WOULD BE WELL FOR ADULTS TO BEAR THIS IN MIND WHO WANT SITTINGS FOR THEMSELVES.

JOHN G. WOLVEN,

OF THE

CITY LIVERY, SALE AND EXCHANGE STABLES,

To supply the great demand of his customers, has purchased of Brewster & Co., of Broome street, New York, a very fine LANDAU CARRIAGE of elegant design, IMPORTED FROM BERLIN, Prussia, at the cost of $3,000. It can be easily changed in three different ways to suit customers—closed, half-top or ll open. He has also new buggies, two-seated park phaetons, first class horses, four-in-hand-turn-outs, and careful drivers, to be let on reasonable terms.

Having purchased nearly an entire new stock, he will sell his entire former stock, consisting of carriages, buggies, harness, three-seated wagons, half-tops, rockaways &c., many of which are nearly new, at a great sacrifice. Summer boarding-house keepers and others who desire to procure good carriages and wagons at low prices, will do well to give him a call. No better bargains can be offered in the City of Kingston.

THE IMPROVED

WHEELER & WILSON

Again Improved.

PERFECTION is our motto, and with this end in view, we have so improved the

as vastly to improve its efficacy, while at the same time much less skill and care are required in its management. Neither the thread nor the cloth require holding, and both the thickest and thinnest goods are sewed perfectly. Seams are crossed with greater ease, and the work guided with scarce an effort. The

of this Machine is the

to carry the loop of the upper thread around the spool containing the under, MAKING THE LOCK STITCH ALIKE ON BOTH SIDES OF FABRIC, thereby doing away with the vibratory motion of the shuttle, the tension upon the under thread, and all devices for taking up slack thread, necessary on all other two-thread machines. The public have endorsed these principles by purchasing 50,000 of our Machines.
